

e-Tips for Parents

M-DCPS Office of Community Engagement | EngageMiamiDade.net | @CommunityEngagement

You Can Help

You know that volunteering is important. And you really want to help out at school. But you work full time, so how can you be involved?

Use your lunch break. Once a month, see if you can use that lunch time to visit the school. You could use the time to read a special story. You might be able to help a student struggling in math or spelling. Or perhaps you could watch the kids on the playground so the teacher can take a short break.

You could also use a vacation day to chaperone a field trip or volunteer in the classroom or help at a school special event. Whatever you do, you'll be playing an important role in your child's learning. Just wait until you see your child's happy smile when you walk through the door on your special day.