DON'T ALWAYS ANSWER YOUR CHILD'S QUESTIONS

Children learn by asking questions. But sometimes, your child can learn more if you don't answer immediately. Even if you know the answer, help your child learn how to find answers for herself.

The next time your child asks a question, help her:

Use the library.

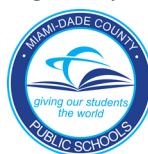

Do research online.

Set up an experiment in your home. If it's safe and appropriate for the question, let your child experiment and discover the answer to the question herself.
